GEO. W. TIPPETT, Editor.

POINT PLEASANT, WEST VA.

Thursday, : : : January 5, 1871.

One would suppose, that Jeff. Davis was still in power and a Confederate Legislature assembled in Tennessee, from the notion of Gen. Pillow's friends, who are petitioning the Legislature to interpose and protect him and his associate, Major Murphy, against the verdict rendered in the United States Court recently for the seizure in 1851 of coal boats and other property belonging to Riddle, Coleman & Co., of Pittsburgh. The Memphis Advertiser is of the opinion that the State cannot refuse this petition without great injustice to its citizens, as the judgment was given for acts done by Pillow and Murphy in the honest and faithful discharge of duty. It will be remembered that the duty consisted in seizing the property of Northern men before any act of secession had been passed, selling it, and placing the proceeds to the credit of a Confederate State organization which afterward usurped the power of the legitimate State Government. The idea of taxing the Union men of Tennessee in order to save Pillow and Murphy from the consequences of their treason, is an outrage, to say the least, and should be resisted in the courts.

The Richmond Dispatch calls upon Congress, if it has any money to spare for canals, to appropriate it to the central water line via the Kanawha and James River Valleys, uniting the Mississippi with the Chesapeake Bay, which, it contends, will strengthen the Union, and be the ever-enduring source of domestic harmony, strength and prosperity.

Richmond appears to be a fated city.—Those who read the tale of horror told of the Spottwood Hotel in that city, on the 26th ult., in which so many lost their lives will recall the burning of the theater there many years ago; and more recently the destruction of the finest part of the city by fire at the close of the war; and last spring the fearful calamity at the Capitol; and still later the serious disasters of the great flood in the James.

WASHINGTON AND OHIO RAILROAD
Our young friend James Spalding, who has been engaged in the Engineer Corps off his road during the past summer, has returned home for winter quarters, and from him we gather many interesting facts respecting the road—its prospects and advantages.

It is ascertained that the distance from Washington to the Ohio river by way of Washington to the Ohio river by way of Weston, is 325½ miles, on a grade not exceeding 52 feet elevation to the mile.—The actual survey of the entire distance between Washington and the Ohio has shortened the estimated distance 14 miles, and this road will reach Cincinnati 100 miles shorter than by any road now made or projected. This will be done at a grade of 52 feet to the mile, as compared with 110½ feet—the grade of the B. & O. road—its great rival. These advantages would seem to warrant the conclusion that capital will seek the investment and that the road will be completed at an early day.

Since the above was in type we learn by a gentleman from Washington City that a few capitalists at North have already taken up $9,500,000 worth of the bonds, and that there will be no difficulty in disposing of the rest. He further informs us that the part of the road has been placed under contract, and that workmen will push the enterprise as rapidly as possible as soon as spring opens. We understand that they own property along the line of the road in the eastern counties, have freely given to the company the right of way through their land, and are doing all in their power to aid in the completion of this important thoroughfare.

Besides this, it appears that the Pittsburgh and Charleston railroad has been organized, with fair prospects, or a cross railroad, which will make Weston the centre of all West Virginia railroad attractions. As for us, we "trust to luck." We have a broad country—plenty of room for railroads and other developments—and we give to all such enterprises a hearty welcome.—Weston Democrat.

We are reliably informed that a few Northern capitalists, says a correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, have already taken up 9,500,000 of the bonds of this road; and that there will be no difficulty in disposing of the rest.

There are thousands of acres of good land in this State as can be found in any other State, entirely unproductive to-day, simply for the want of population sufficient to work it. There are large tracts along this line that are either not used at all, or only for the purpose of grazing cattle upon. This State abounds in land timbered with the best to be found in the country, and a large portion of it richly underlaid with coal and iron ore. The best portion of the Alleghany coal fields lie in this State.

When this road is finished, it will open up to agriculturists good land at cheap rates, good climate and cheap communication with the best markets in the country. There can be no doubt but that the building of this road will bring into our State large numbers of people who are seeking homes. They would find it much more to their advantage to establish themselves in West Virginia than in the Western States. Here they will find a healthy climate, a soil naturally fertile and easily cultivated; a settled society in almost every section of the State; good public schools in every county, and churches of almost every denomination. We urge upon our moneyed men to aid and encourage the building of this road, which when completed, will put West Virginia in the front ranks of the States of this Union. We all want to see our State peopled, and in its agricultural and mineral resources developed; and by internal improvements it can be done.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Report of the Point Pleasant Public School for four months, beginning Sept. 1870, and ending December 23d 1870.

The general health of all has been good. Having long since learned that there is no royal road to learning we have sought to impress on our students the necessity of adopting as their motto Hard Work!

As teachers, we would kindly and yet plainly remind parents and guardians of the duties they owe to those under their care. We have a right to speak upon this subject since the work which parents urge upon and expect from the teacher alone, is really the work of parent, teacher and pupil combined. It can be effected only by the vigorous cooperation of all, and hence it follows as a general rule that those children whose interests are looked after at home make our most orderly and best students in school. Parents! let us work together then, for the good of the children. But remember first, that the material on which we work is an immortal soul destined to live forever; secondly that while it is subject to our personal influence as teachers for about six hours, daily, you have eighteen in which you are shaping and fixing its destiny!

The State demands this, since it will be compelled to support him as a pauper, punish him as a criminal, protect him as a citizen, or be ruled by him as a law-giver.—That the boy of to-day shall be either a despised pauper; an incorrigible outlaw; a good citizen or a wise law-giver, is a grave consideration which forces itself upon every candid mind.—That he shall be one or the other, is certain—which he shall be depends on the parent—the efforts of the teacher to the contrary notwithstanding.—Society, too, demands of the parent the proper education of the child. Eloquent-ness-like, the parent, by the potent wand of personal influence, evokes from the nursery, either a Serpent vile, or Angel pure, that shall go forth into the Eden of social life, the one to bless, the other, to curse mankind! But, if the State and Society, hold the parent responsible for the morals and mind of the child, how much more does God, who is the Author of all good, whether social or national.

PERRY COLLIER, Sec'y.

An old negro in Jackson Mississippi, dug up eight hundred dollars in greenbacks which he had buried in his back yard, and spread them on the hearth to dry. During his absence for a moment, a spark set fire to the money, and reduced it to tinder.
